| 3 Scope of Work

The City wishes to update their current cost allocation plan model with current data in order to provide updated allocation results for use in the current fiscal year budgeting and projections. An analytical data update would allow the City to update their current model, while reducing the burden on City staff to gather and input data and information. The following points outline the key services associated with an Analytical Data Update:

- Review of Current Plan Structure: The project team would review the current plan's structure with key City staff in order to ensure no significant changes need to be incorporated into the updated plan.
- Data Collection and Analysis: The project team would provide selected City staff with worksheets and data collection lists used in the previous plan. The worksheets would need to be reviewed and or revised by staff, and updated allocation data provided. Draft results would be presented to staff for review, and revisions made as necessary.
- Presentation of Results: Once final results have been achieved, the project team would work with selected City staff to ensure understanding and applications of the plan. If desired, the project team could also present results to interested departments or fund representatives.

This update will provide staff with updated results from the Cost Allocation Plan, as well as an updated model that can be updated in-house in future years. Providing an Analytical Data Update of the full cost allocation plan could take up to a month, depending on City staff and data availability.
